Dear Pouria,

I would like to thank the Los Angeles Convention Center for another excellent job this year. The 2007 show was the largest and most successful show to date. We understand this growth creates significant challenges for both facility and staff at the LACC. The Convention Center's dedication and customer-focused approach, as well as recent upgrades, enabled us to meet these challenges.

Specifically, recent facility and service improvements were critical in making it possible for exhibitors to double the amount of overhead lighting and associated electrical over the previous year. Also, being able to meet the technology demands of an increasing number of national television crews and their satellite trucks continues to be critical to the show growth.

We anticipate continued expansion in the years to come, which will only increase the demands on the facility and staff. We have confidence knowing that during this exciting time of growth, the LACC team will be there to support us.

Sincerely,
